Guam's Special Problems

A five-man team has been selected to review with Federal officials the relationship of Guam and the Federal government and Federal programs, Lt. Gov. Kurt B. Moylan announced in an interview Friday.

Moylan will head the team composed of Gerald S. A. Perez, director of land management and vice chairman; Attorney General Keith Andrews, Joaquin Blas, director of revenue and taxation and Pete Manibusan, special assistant to the Governor.

The joint review team came about as a result of discussions and correspondence between Governor Carlos G. Camacho and Secretary of the Interior Rogers C. B. Morton.

Secretary Morton said he would set up a high level secretarial cabinet meeting soon to start the ground work and then the Guam team will join them, said Moylan.

"We will touch on many things," said Moylan. "For example Program 20, the $55 million for sewer, water and schools, bus transportation, the whole role of federal programs and how they apply to Guam, and our relationship to the federal government.

"We have not set a date for the Government to go to Washington on this because we are still tied up with the energy crisis. We still have too many immediate problems which require his attention. Perhaps in March, the governor will meet in Washington with the secretaries of various departments, introduce himself and talk about problems such as immigration and law and order."

Moylan emphasized that this committee is not a status committee but strictly for problem areas that would benefit by such a liaison group.

"We will go ahead to solve problems, such as immigration. Right now we cannot bring in any H-2 workers for service industry. We would discuss the Farmers Act and U.S. Dept. of Agriculture regulations on bringing in foreign produce," he said.

"Guam must be permitted to bring in needed labor required to sustain our economy. We should relax USDA regulations so we can bring in produce at a reasonable price to sustain our work force. We should be able to bring in the work force for auto repair shops, air conditioning repairmen and agriculture workers as well.

"The Committee will consider these problems. Each of the persons will use their know-how and talents to find solutions. Certain problems can be solved administratively and these are the problems we would concern ourselves with," said Moylan.

For instance, U. S.

Immigration officials could review Guam's Labor problem with the Labor Department and they could solve it administratively, he said. Or the Agriculture Department could say now that they know about Guam's problems they could work to lift restrictions for Guam. They could grant the Governor the sole authority in these matters. Certain problems can be solved at the administrative level.

"We will not explore areas that deal with Congress and laws," said Moylan. "If we need laws, we will come back to Guam and let the legislature know we need a law and ask them to endorse it and give us a resolution. Then we would go to Congressman Won Pat as one voice. I think that has been our problem for a long time. Instead of speaking to Washington as one voice, we speak in many voices.

"Won Pat is our voice in Congress. Let's use him. Let's channel the information to him and let him speak for us. Congressman Won Pat and other sources in Washington could use their resources to solve these problems.

"If there is a Congressional bill required, the committee can pass it up to Won Pat and ask him to introduce it. We'll back him 100 per cent. We'll work hand in hand with the Federal government to solve Guam's problems," said Moylan.
