Announcement on the Analysis

Delegates, we are handing out the first draft of the Analysis of the Constitution. This is taken in large part from the Committee reports but it also includes points made on the floor.

The Analysis is what people turn to when they want to know how a particular provision of the Constitution works. It is important that you take it home and read it over the Sunday break. We will get to this on Monday or Tuesday, after we finish up any remaining articles, and take care of the Schedule on Transitional Matters.

Some parts of the Analysis are still with the reports that we were using on first reading. They are clearly marked. We will have a new version of the Analysis after we get finished with the second reading on all the articles. But a large part of the Analysis will not change, because we have already approved a large number of articles on second reading. So look it over carefully so you can be prepared when we get to this on our agenda.

Thank you.

Land and Personal Rights

The Committee on Land and Personal Rights will meet from 6:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. on Monday morning to consider Article 17, Section 4, Section 5, and Section 6. At 11:00 a.m. we will start our plenary session. If the Committee on Land and Personal Rights is not finished by 10:30 we will take up Article 3 in the Committee of the whole and to start.
