EXPEDITED PURCHASE JUSTIFICATION

As President of the Third Constitutional Convention, I concurred and agreed on the purchase of computers and printer made by Ms. Deanne C. Siemer from White Coconut Computer Service.

The purchase made by Ms. Siemer was necessary and could not be avoided because the work of the Third Constitutional Convention were all in the computers and because of delayed payments coming out of the Department of Finance, the owner of the computer company insisted that either he received payment within a given "short-time" to our Convention staff or he retrieved his computers at a specific time. Please refer to Ms. Siemer's letter of August 8, 1995, and made a part of Post Convention's purchase requisition No. PC95-003, dated August 31, 1995.

In the interest of preserving the work of the Third Constitutional Convention, the purchase of the computers and the printer was necessary and that the approval of the purchase requisition and the issuance of a purchase order in order to pay Ms. Siemer is requested.

Should you require further information or have any question, please let me know.

HERMAN T. GUERRERO
President, Third Constitutional Convention

Memo for Herman T. Guerrero
Chair, Post-Convention Committee

From: Deanne Siemer

Re: Computer support

Because of the difficulty with White Coconut Computer Services on Saturday, I had to pay for two computers and a printer in order to have a place to put all of the Constitutional Convention's computer files on very short notice. Bud White gave us only 30 minutes notice that he was taking out all of the computers rented for the legal team because his deadline for past-due payments had not been met.

I did not have my laptop computer at the office; and I did not have any other compatible computer to which these valuable files could be transferred without significant risk of loss. For that reason, we backed up five of the computers onto the two computers that Howard and I had been using. Mr. White agreed not to repossess these computers if I would buy them, and commit to that immediately.

I paid for the computers, software, printer, and cabling by check. The total amount was slightly more than $5,700. I suggest that the Post-Convention Committee buy the computers from me when funding is available. We need them, in any event, for Post-Convention work. When the Post-Convention Committee's work is completed, the computers can be sent to a government office. They are well-configured for office work and are loaded with a complete suite of software.

I apologize for not getting your approval before writing the check. I talked with Alicia about this, but there was no time to make any alternative arrangements. One of the delegates offered to fund the computers with a personal check, but I thought it was better if I did it from my own funds as there would not be any question that it was for a necessary purpose. We needed to save the work product that had been done for the Convention, and this seemed to be the only practical alternative given the very short time frame in which we had to make a decision.

A copy of the invoice is attached.
