Dear Governor Camacho:

The pride which the people of Guam have in the progress they have attained in the two decades since the signing of the Organic Act is shared by all their fellow Americans.

Courageous in surmounting the tribulations of war and occupation, the people of Guam displayed the same brave and united spirit again when they faced one of nature's worst modern calamities, Typhoon Karen. Twice they have met adversity in a manner from which all of us can derive strength and inspiration.

Guam is indeed the place where America's day begins. And I hope that you will commend, on my behalf, the qualities that have more than confirmed the truth of these words.

Sincerely,

RICHARD NIXON
