BIOGRAPHIC SKETCH

From 1975 to 1977, under the Ford administration, James Morrison Wilson, Jr. headed the first office of human rights and humanitarian affairs in the Department of State at the assistant secretary level with the title of "coordinator." Concurrently, as U.S. representative for international refugee negotiations and discussions, he was also given the personal rank of Ambassador by President Ford.

A career Foreign Service Officer, Mr. Wilson retired in 1978 at the age of 60 after 36 years with the federal government, including military service in two wars and assignments in the Departments of Defense and State, in Washington and overseas. He was born in China of American missionary parents and grew up there before coming to the United States in 1935 for study at Swarthmore College, where he was graduated Phi Beta Kappa with high honors. The start of World War II in Europe found him in Switzerland attending the Geneva School of International Studies from which he returned to get his master's degree from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy in 1940.

After a brief stint of reporting for the Louisville Courier Journal he joined the Kentucky National Guard and was inducted into federal service as a private in January, 1941. Ten months later his unit was in mid Pacific on a troop carrier bound for the Philippines when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, but turned around and ended in Hawaii. After completing field artillery OCS the following summer Wilson was assigned to the Third Infantry Division, with whom he landed in North Africa in November for the attack on Casablanca. After service in Tunisia he took part in the Sicilian landings and a later amphibious operation on the north coast. He again saw action at Salerno, continuing to the winterline at Cassino, being wounded twice.

Just prior to the Anzio landings Wilson was selected as aide-de-camp to General Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., then commanding the Third Division which made that assault -- an association which lasted for the next two years. General Truscott tookover command of the Anzio beachhead in February, 1944 and led the Sixth Corps later through the breakout and capture of Rome. In August he commanded the assault forces in the Southern France landings and fought his corps rapidly north to meet Patton's forces at the Moselle. When General Truscott was then named to head the Fifth Army in Italy, Wilson went along and remained with him through the end of the Italian campaign and a brief assignment to China. This was followed after V-J day by several months in occupied Germany when General Truscott was assigned to take over the Third Army and military government in Bavaria and western Czechoslovakia from General Patton. Wilson returned to the United States in early 1946 for separation from the military service as a Lt. Colonel at 27, having been awarded the Bronze Star with V for valor and an Oak Leaf Cluster, the Purple Heart, ten battle stars and decorations from the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, Brazil and Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Wilson graduated from Harvard Law School in 1948 and became a member of the District of Columbia Bar in 1949. Recalled to active duty with the Air Force as a reserve officer, he worked under General Pierpont Morgan Hamilton on early negotiations for U.S. military facilities abroad and in 1950-51 for the American air bases in Morocco. Sent to Europe for similar negotiations for bases in NATO countries, he reverted to civilian status and was subsequently assigned to U.S. NATO headquarters in Paris, where he headed an office conducting base negotiations in Europe and North Africa. He was assigned concurrently by the Office of the Secretary of Defense as advisor to the U.S. Embassies in Paris and Bonn and was a member of the U.S. delegations at the 1954 London and Paris conferences which formalized peace arrangements for Western Germany, returning to Washington at the end of the year. For his work during this period he was awarded the Legion of Honor by the French Government.

In early 1955 Mr. Wilson established the first office to handle world wide base negotiations in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs in the Pentagon. For the next three years he participated in a variety of international conferences and negotiations around the world, including the first international agreements for the exchange and safeguarding of nuclear defense information. He also took part in 1957 in the preparation of the first Presidential study of base rights policies, completing that study after the death of the special presidential representative who had been in charge of it.

In February, 1958 Mr. Wilson left Defense for State to become assistant coordinator of the foreign assistance program, at the level of a deputy assistant secretary. This new office, established under C. Douglas Dillon, then Undersecretary of State, had the responsibility for coordinating all U.S. military, economic and international financial assistance programs on behalf of the Secretary of State and functioned until the beginnings of the Kennedy administration. Wilson had meanwhile joined the regular Foreign Service as a lateral entrant. In the summer of 1961 he was assigned as Counselor for Economic Affairs to the American Embassy in Madrid, where he also headed up the U.S. economic assistance program for Spain during its final year.

In July 1964 he was transferred to Bangkok, Thailand as deputy chief of the U.S. diplomatic mission with the personal rank of Minister, arriving just before the Gulf of Tonkin incident. This was followed by a rapid intensification of U.S. activities in Thailand incident to the U.S. build up in South Vietnam and other parts of Southeast Asia. In Bangkok he also served as U.S. deputy representative to the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. Two years later he was moved to a like position as Minister in Manila, where he remained for four years, acting during that time for over a year and a half as U.S. charge d'affaires in the absence of an American ambassador. In the fall of 1969 he served as the lead administration witness in a series of lengthy hearings conducted by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on U.S. commitments abroad. On completion of his tour in Manila Mr. Wilson was awarded the Order of Sikatuna by the President of the Philippines for his work there.

In Washington from the summer of 1970 to 1972 he was Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and the Pacific, with special responsibility for Southeast Asia, less Vietnam and Laos. At the end of 1972, following recuperation from a serious illness, he was named by the President as U.S. deputy representative for Micronesian status negotiations and head of the interdepartmental committee charged with formulating U.S. policy recommendations on the termination of the U.N. trusteeship in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. This assignment culminated in an agreement at the end of 1974 to bring the Northern Mariana Islands into the United States as a commonwealth.

Recalled to State in March of 1975 to undertake the brand new job of humanitarian affairs coordination, Mr. Wilson was called off temporarily to become deputy director of a Presidential task force charged with handling the emrgency created by the influx of Indochinese refugees after the fall of Saigon. In May he resumed his duties as the new Coordinator for Humanitarian Affairs under the Deputy Secretary of State, charged with responsibility for international refugee programs and policies, U.S. POW's and MIA's and State's new responsibilities in the field of human rights. This position was further refined by legislation in the summer of 1976 as a Presidential appointment, with the title changed to "Coordinator for Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs" and Mr. Wilson was formally appointed to the position by President Ford. After Mr. Wilson's departure from office in the spring of 1977 the title was further changed by legislation to Assistant Secretary.*

Since retirement Mr. Wilson has continued to live in Bethesda, Mary-land. He was married in 1951, to Joan Frances Rathvon. They have five children: Morrison, Julia, Peter, Martha amd John.

* In 1978 the position was further modified when responsibility for refugees was removed from Human Rights and Humanitarian Affairs and established as a separate bureau in the Department and responsibility for government wide refugee policies and international negotiations was vested in a separate "coordinator" who was also given the title of Ambassador at Large.
